ENEMY CAPITAL, WAR INDUSTRIES SERIOUSLY HURT

Arnold Says B-29's Now Set For Systematic Destruction Of Isle

YANKS HIT FROM CAIPAN

Attack To Be Carried On Relentlessly Declares General Arnold

WASHINGTON, Nov. 24—A "sizable" task force of mighty B-29 Superfortresses pounded Tokyo today in an opening attack against the Japanese capital that will be carried on relentlessly from the air until American forces storm the shores of the enemy homeland.

Gen. H. H. Arnold, chief of the 20th Bomber Command, announced that the huge American bombers, operating in daylight from new bases on Saipan, raided Tokyo for the first time and said war industries in the enemy capital have been "badly hurt."

There were no immediate details on the historic raid, but Arnold, in a report to President Roosevelt, made it clear that the B-29's would now carry out systematic destruction of Tokyo and other important Japanese cities.

Not Hit-And-Run

Arnold declared that the raid "is in no sense a hit-and-run" attack, and added that it is "a calculated extension of our air power."

With establishment of bases on Saipan, won at the cost of the lives of thousands of American troops, Arnold said the B-29's "now may strike at will into the enemy homeland."

"No part of the Japanese empire is now out of our range," he continued, "no war factory too remote to feel our bombs. The battle for Japan has been joined."

"The systematic demolition of Japan's war production, begun six months ago from China bases, henceforth will be carried out with decisive vigor, softening up the Japanese heart for the ultimate invasion by combined United Nations, land, sea and air forces."

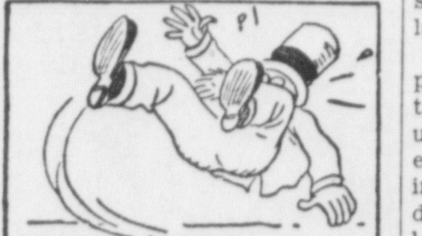

"This will not be accomplished in a short time. The battle is just beginning. But today we opened against Tokyo an attack which will be carried on relentlessly from the air until the day of land-sea invasion."

Strike From Saipan

The Tokyo raid was carried out by the newly-established 21st Bomber Command of Brig. Gen. H. S. Hansell, Jr., from bases on Saipan and marked the first attack on the Jap capital since Brig. Gen. Jimmy Doolittle's famous raid on the enemy homeland in April, 1942.

Longest Range Battle Flight of History Has Dramatic Beginning

(Editor's Note: The following dispatch from Clark Lee, International News Service staff correspondent, was filed from Saipan just before he took off on the history-making B-24 raid over Tokyo.)

BY CLARK LEE
TWENTY-FIRST BOMBER COMMAND BASE ON SAIPAN ISLAND, Nov. 24—B-29 Superforts roared off Saipan airfields this morning, headed for Tokyo to strike the first blow of a gigantic air offensive aimed at systematically pulverizing Japan's war industry.

With the early morning sun shining on their sleek aluminum sides, the world's largest bombers, with mighty engines singing powerfully but not noisily, quickly gathered speed until they rose from the long black-topped runway in a gradual climb.

At brief intervals plane after plane lifted a great load of explosives into the air and, after jockeying into formation, steered a course toward the target, 1,600 miles northward across the Pacific.

Dramatic Beginning

It was the dramatic beginning of the longest range air battle the world has ever seen wherein our objective is to smash factories, railroads and shipyards in the Japanese homeland while the Japanese will fight with all weapons at their command to drive us out of the air over their islands.

The men who won the Saipan beachhead at great cost wouldn't recognize the island battlefield today. Through one of the war's greatest engineering feats it has been converted into a gigantic air base housing many thousands of men and is supplied by air as well as by sea.

Army engineers, self-styled "the flying castles," under Lt. Col. Edward A. Flanders of Oshkosh, Wis., started building the superfort runways even while ground fighting was in progress.

In preparation for the first raid, shore-based army, navy and marine aircraft of the 7th bomber command have been persistently and systematically attacking enemy bases such as Iwo Jima in the Kazans and Hoho Jima and Chichi Jima in the Bonins, dropping 2,500,000 pounds of explosives during the last three months, neutralizing Jap airfields so successfully that only two ineffectual raids have been made on the Saipan Superfort base up to today.

Japs See B-29
Residents of Tokyo several weeks ago saw the first B-29 from this base.

Three photo-reconnaissance missions were flown by a Superfort nicknamed "Tokyo Rose," piloted by Capt. Ralph Strakley, of Jefferson, Ohio.

Strakley made three flights within a week over Tokyo, getting invaluable weather data in addition to most excellent photographs of industrial areas which now for the first time are feeling the terrible weight of American explosives plunging from more than five miles above the city.

So far as is known, these were the first non-Japanese airmen ever to show the imperial palace. Any foreigner looking down on the palace, according to Japanese custom, is subject to death. Tokyo residents will shortly become accustomed to going to the air raid shelter in the palace grounds while Superforts are overhead.

Good Jap Planes

Jap fighters which are capable of climbing into the stratosphere and challenging the Superforts are known to our airmen as "Jacks," which is a navy plane, and "Tojo," which is a radial engine army fighter resembling the P-47 Thunderbolt.

VOROSHILOV IN FAR EAST ON SECRET MISSION

LONDON, Nov. 24—Marshal Klementi Y. Voroshilov, former high commander of Russian Army units and until recently a member of the Soviet state defense committee, has been assigned to a new important mission in the Far East, the Reuter News Agency reported today in a dispatch from Stockholm.

Exact nature of Voroshilov's mission was undisclosed, except that he has been delegated to act in connection with Sino-Russian relations.

His release from the defense commission was announced Nov. 22 in a five-line item in the Russian press.

Radio Seeks To Belittle Attack, But Domei Says Fires Are Started

Yanks Appear In Ten Groups And "Flee After Dropping Bombs"

NEW YORK, Nov. 24—Japanese imperial headquarters, admitting that Tokyo was blasted by American B-29's, asserted today that "about 70" of the herculean Superfortresses carried out the raid and that three were shot down.

Enemy sources were swift to acknowledge the attacks, Radio Tokyo broadcasting an account of the bombing some four hours after the American planes unleashed their loads of incendiaries and explosives.

Radio Tokyo, trying to belittle results of the attack, was in disagreement with Japanese Domei Agency dispatches which admitted fires had been started in the Japanese capital.

The official Japanese communique, intercepted by the FCC, was issued at 4 p. m. (4 a. m. EWT).

The FCC simultaneously reported that all of Tokyo's radio transmitters apparently were broadcasting on their regular schedules at the time of the attack, indicating that the Japanese probably were taken by surprise.

The communique said: "Enemy B-29's raided Tokyo this afternoon but owing to effective interceptions the raiders failed to attain any tangible results. Early this afternoon, enemy planes in 10-odd groups, each comprising several bombers, penetrated into the skies over Tokyo and fled toward the east after dropping bombs and incendiaries in the southern and northern outskirts."

"Residential sections, including one hospital, were slightly damaged. No fire was incurred. The results attained by our intercepting fighters and ground fire are now under investigation."

"Several enemy planes also appeared over central Japan, but fled without causing any damage."

The Domei Agency admitted that "small fires" were caused by the attack, then hastily minimized the blazes with the assertion that they were "immediately brought under control." Domei somewhat "soft" (Continued on Page Two)

COPS LECTURE TEEN AGED BOYS FOR TNT THEFT

CHICAGO, Nov. 24—Police today lectured six teen-aged boys after a quantity of TNT and other dangerous materials of war were missed from an ammunition dump where the Navy "invasion" show is being held in Chicago.

Ten one-half pound cans of TNT were still sought after police recovered eight cans of TNT, a quantity of signal fuses, two walkie-talkies and 14 rounds of salute ammunition.

Police said six boys admitted taking the war materials home on crowded street cars. A 13-year-old boy took apart a fragmentation bomb which Marine Capt. Donald H. Williams said would have challenged the skill of any man in his outfit to accomplish without injury to himself.

EIGHT MORE JAP SHIPS SUNK BY YANKEE PLANES

GEN. MACARTHUR'S HEADQUARTERS, PHILIPPINES, Nov. 24—American planes, sweeping over enemy bases in the Southwest Pacific, have sunk an additional eight Japanese cargo ships, damaged three, and probably sank a 6,000 ton vessel, Gen. Douglas MacArthur announced today.

BRITAIN AIRS "MUTUAL AID"

$2,437,000,000 Contributed To U. S. In Reverse Lend-Lease

WASHINGTON, Nov. 24—Great Britain reported today that the embattled United Kingdom has contributed two billion 437 million dollars in reverse lend-lease to the United States, while supplying almost as much aid from a war-tightened economy to her other allies.

The total of Britain's share in the "mutual aid" program up to last June 30, an official report disclosed, was more than four billion 250 million dollars, of which Russia received in excess of one billion dollars.

These totals, which cover many instances in which British production furnished complete supplies of items for U. S. use, do not embrace "material aid furnished to partisan and patriot forces fighting the Germans inside occupied Europe."

The report, presented to parliament as a "white paper," revealed that Britain completely provided this country with such items as spark plugs for many types of American planes, jetison fuel tanks, more than seven million gasoline cans ("Jerrycans"), and airplane armor plate and tires.

Britain's reverse lend-lease items ranged from 133 air fields provided the U. S. Army Air Force to the 100 million dollar portable invasion "harbors" used in the Normandy invasion.

"In an economy already highly organized for war," the second British mutual aid report stated, "the provision of mutual aid to meet the requirements of United States, Russian and other Allied (Continued on Page Two)"

ROCKET BOMBS TAKE TOLL IN SOUTH ENGLAND

LONDON, Nov. 24—The British civilian populace today sustained increased casualties as a result of an early morning attack in Southern England by German vengeance weapons, either the V-1 buzz bombs or V-2 rocket bombs, or both.

An official communique disclosed that the attack lasted from dawn yesterday until 7 a. m., and revealed, in addition to the fact that further casualties were suffered, that damage was inflicted.

ARMY CARAVAN HERE AS BOND DRIVE STARTS

"Pickaway county's Sixth War Loan drive opened Friday with solicitors starting their canvass of Circleville and the county and a display of Army equipment calling attention to the war needs."

During the next week chairmen of the local campaign hope the county's goal of $1,286,000 will be exceeded. Drive workers are urged to make solicitations at once so that the drive can be completed by December 1 instead of dragging out for several weeks.

A display of Army equipment in front of the court house attracted passerbys. The caravan, in charge of Major W. J. Bell, arrived here from Lancaster about 11 a. m. It was met by city officials and members of the drive committee and escorted to the court house.

Friday evening the caravan will move to parking places in front of the Grand theatre.

CENTRAL PARK MAY TAKE NAME OF AL SMITH

NEW YORK, Nov. 24—The city council will be asked next week to rename Central Park in honor of former Governor Alfred E. Smith. Tammany leader Edward W. McLoughlin advanced the suggestion for renaming the park and declared it would be more fitting than to erect a statue or memorial to the beloved "Al."

PROUDEST KID HEARS DAD HAS RAIDED TOKYO

NEW YORK, Nov. 24—The proudest kid in town today was Patrick O'Donnell, blonde thatched and seven.

Sleep vanished from his eyes like magic when he tumbled from his bed in the O'Donnell home in Jamaica, Queens, and heard his grandmother say:

"Your daddy has bombed Tokyo."

"Daddy" is Brig. Gen. Emmett (Rosy) O'Donnell, Jr., the man who led the parade of Superfortresses over Japan's capital.

YANKEES BOMB PORTS ALONG YANGTZE RIVER

NEW YORK, Nov. 24—The Yangtze river ports of Hankow and Wuchang, in Central China's Hupeh province, were bombed by 14 American Liberators and Mitchell bombers, a Japanese Domei dispatch reported today. The Domei bulletin monitored by the FCC said the raid occurred Wednesday night, and claimed that the only damage and casualties that resulted were inflicted on the Chinese residential areas.

NAZIS LOSING HISTORIC FIGHT

Observers Point To Fact Huns Unable To Stop Allies Anywhere

LONDON, Nov. 24—German armies on the western front today are losing the mightiest battle of all time, according to views expressed in Allied high military circles, where the situation in the Vosges mountain sector was scrutinized with particular interest.

The Nazis position in the Vosges, on the western bank of the Rhine river, was described as being "torn into shreds" by masterful planning and timing of the Allies' Alsace campaign.

Enemy forces remaining along the heights of the Vosges mountain ranges were considered by observers as being in an almost hopeless plight. Their bleak chance of escape was compared to the condition of other German forces who have fallen before them—the beleaguered Nazi defenders of Normandy who were trapped in the closing jaws of a pincer that bit into the Falaise gap.

Allied military experts admitted that progress is slow on the northern end of the Germans' once-vaunted west wall. The comparative snail pace of Allied advances in the Hurtgen forest area and northward into the Netherlands was attributed largely to the weather, the inclement elements apparently having proved as much of a barrier as the German shells and bullets.

Regardless of the slow tempo of progress in the North, observers kept one main point in mind. They can not find one single spot along the entire Western front where the Germans yet have succeeded in halting General Dwight D. Eisenhower's mighty offensive drive!

It is believed generally that the bloodiest and most rugged battles remain to be fought before the Nazis finally cave in. Observers optimistically point out, however, that the tremendous pressure General Eisenhower's six armies have exerted from the Vosges to Holland undoubtedly has strained the German front line defenders to very nearly their limit of endurance.

A sudden Allied break-through would be no very great surprise to the men closely in touch with Western Front operations.

RARE WAR PRIZE

SOMEWHERE IN THE SOUTH PACIFIC — (DELAYED) — Tch. Sgt. William L. Perkins, 24, of Cairo, Ill., found two girdles when he landed with the Marines at Guam.

BIGGEST GAINS MADE ON SOUTH END OF FRONT

Americans, French Drive To Surround 50,000 German Troops In Vosges Area

STRASBOURG THREATENED

3,000 Prisoners Taken In Rapid Thrust On Upper Rhine Territory

By International News Service

Both the war-torn empires of Japan and Germany felt the growing weight of Allied arms today as Tokyo suffered its second American bombing and the defenders of the Third Reich reeled back under the assault of Gen. Dwight D. Eisenhower's armies.

Six Allied armies on the western front were striking deeper into the soil of Germany.

The outstanding advances were made on the southern end of the 400 mile front where American and French troops were fighting to cut off an estimated 50,000 Nazis in the Vosges mountains.

French tanks, with U. S. Seventh Army infantry in close support, reached the historic city of Strasbourg on the Upper Rhine in a rapid thrust. They captured more than 3,000 prisoners, including two German generals.

This Franco-American thrust swept 20 miles through the Saverne gap across the Alsace plain to reach Strasbourg and it freed many Alsatian towns.

Nazis Face Destruction

Farther to the south, the French First Army was working in close cooperation to trap the Germans in the Vosges by working up the west bank of the Rhine river. With these troops striking north of Mulhouse, front line reports indicated that the Nazis would be forced to flee across the Rhine rapidly or face destruction and capture.

Ten bridges between Karlsruhe and the Swiss frontier were knocked out, leaving the Germans in the Vosges only one rail and one road bridge at Karlsruhe for an organized escape. Field dispatches said the enemy was supplementing these floating bridges used by night and dismantled in the daytime.

Counterattacks Slow Allies

On the northern flank of the Vosges operation, the U. S. Third Army moved closer to the Saar basin rail center of Saarbrücken, capturing a town about five miles below the city. Bitter fighting, characterized by Nazi counterattacks, slowed Allied gains all along the northern half of the line but the U. S. First and Ninth and the British Second Armies moved relentlessly ahead.

In Italy, British Eighth Army troops forged a bridgehead across the Cosina river south of Faenza after 24 hours of bitter fighting. On the Eastern front, the Red Army renewed its drive into Czechoslovakia and seized the famous wine center of Tokay in Hungary.

And in the Philippines, Gen. Douglas MacArthur's doughboys captured Limon and threatened to roll up the entire Yamashita line, the main Japanese defense on Leyte.

NUBBINS RESTS NICELY AFTER TURKEY DINNER

DENVER, Nov. 24—Forest "Nubbins" Hoffman was reported today to be "resting nicely" in a Denver hospital after eating a big Thanksgiving dinner with all the trimmings.

The three-year-old Cheyenne, Wyo., child, who was given a Christmas party last Sunday because he was not expected to live until Dec. 25, was brought to the Denver hospital last Monday and has shown steady improvement since that time.

He is suffering from an obstruction in the bladder which has poisoned his system.

Attending physicians announced that if he continues to improve, an operation will be ordered for removal of the obstruction.

ENEMY CAPITAL, WAR INDUSTRIES SERIOUSLY HURT

pointed out that Japan is now gripped in an aerial pincer, with the huge American bombers operating from the new 21st Bomber Command on Saipan along with the 20th Bomber Command in China. He added that the B-29's can sustain the attack against Japan "until the destruction of her war industries has been completed."

Saipan island was won at the cost of more than 3,000 American lives last June and July. Forty thousand Japanese were killed in the Marianas islands of Saipan, Tinian and Guam as American marines and army troops seized and established the fields to make possible today's historic blow at the heart of the Japanese war effort.

Arnold said that the vigor of the attack from Saipan "should be convincing proof that these far Pacific islands, captured by our army and navy at great cost in men and material, have been put to the greatest possible use."

Industries Hurt

Tokyo's war industries have been badly hurt by a blow made possible by the Americans who fought and died for the Marianas," he said. "Now, as our American factories feed the voracious appetite of our B-29's with replacement bombs, we will pound Japan's war machine out of existence."

"No matter where the Japanese may try to hide their factories we will seek them out and destroy them. We are going to do just that. Japan has sowed the wind, not let it reap the whirlwind."

Arnold also indicated the scope of American plans for the all-out bombing of Japan when he announced that Lieut. Gen. Millard F. Harmon, one of the army's leading air chiefs, has been appointed deputy commander of the 20th airforce and will direct operations in the Pacific of both the 20th and 21st bomber command.

In a statement similar to Arnold's, Harmon said that the initial operation against Tokyo from the Marianas has brought Japan within range of American superfortresses from the east as well as from the west.

All Japan Vulnerable

"No part of the homeland of Japan is now safe from land-based air attacks," Gen. Harmon said. "We can hit where and when we choose."

"This marks the true beginning of a new phase of the air war against Japan, which in its various aspects will steadily unfold," Harmon continued. "The coordinated, synchronized action of all elements of land, sea and air forces in the Pacific has proved to be a mighty striking force. It will not lessen in power in the months ahead."

"The time is not far now when Japan will be subjected to the combined efforts of air units based from Alaska through the Philippines and over into China—a ring of air forces focused on the imperial empire."

Front Door Opened

Establishment of the new B-29 base on Saipan opens the front door to aerial bombardment of the Japanese homeland. Supplies and bombs can be now rushed to the command there in short order, compared to the route over the "hump" in the Himalayas into China.

Today's announcement was the first disclosure that the 21st Bomber Command was in existence. It was activated on March 8, 1944, even before U. S. Marines stormed into Saipan.

Today's mission was the 17th undertaken by the B-29's since are believed to have a new twin-engine high altitude fighter.

In the great battle of annihilation against the Luftwaffe which began last February, heavy bombers attacking Germany's aviation industry had escorted up to 1,000 fighters giving cover to and from the targets.

Here, however, the Superforts won't have any fighter escort because the great range precludes such protection. They will simply have to bull in against the Nips and rely for protection on their own guns which are controlled from a new, highly-modern central firing system.

Another difference from the battle for Germany is that if you crash in the vast expanses of the Pacific there is little chance of rescue.

Nor can crews—who remember the fate of Doolittle's captured fliers executed by the Japs—count on being taken prisoner. So this is a fight to the death.

In addition to their fighter defense the Japs apparently have very good anti-aircraft guns which are accurate up to 25,000 feet and can reach 40,000 feet.

Pilots Briefed

"Let's get some sleep and get ready to go to war in the morning,"

With those words Brig. Gen. Emmett O'Donnell ended final briefing yesterday evening of pilots who took off this morning to raid Tokyo.

O'Donnell personally led one group of the mission in a plane named "Dauntless Dottie." Another group was led by Col. Wiley Gandy, 37, whose hometown is Andalusia, Ala.

Warning the pilots of a 110-mile-an-hour west wind blowing over Tokyo, O'Donnell told them not to get caught napping by the wind.

"The toughest part of the mission may well be landing," O'Donnell said. "Don't relax until your wheels are on the ground. We've been together for eight months training to become a closely knit, hard-hitting, smart flying group of pilots."

"The mission won't be any pushover as we face an enemy who is fanatically resolute and must expect tough opposition. The first show won't be a knockout punch, but we'll be throwing the first punch."

The pilots, sitting on iron stands in a wooden building and wearing a variety of headgear, snapped to attention as O'Donnell and Brig. Gen. Haywood S. Hansell, Jr., commander of the 21st Bomber Command entered.

Targets Cited

Hansell stood before a map of Tokyo and said: "This is the works. This mission is important for three reasons."

"Firstly to the Japanese people who have been told their military operations are successful everywhere—against our Army and Navy, against the Chinese and their bases were established in China last June, and the eighth attack which they have made on Japan's home islands. All the previous raids, however, were directed with good effect at Japanese war industries and other military facilities on the island of Kyushu.

Today's mission was the 17th undertaken by the B-29's since even against us. Bombs dropped on precision targets in the great cities of Japan will correct that false impression.

"Secondly and important to US: We've received directions for operations against Japan and have selected primary targets which are precision targets whose destruction will, without a question, break the back of Japan's military machine."

"Success tomorrow will set the standard. In the final analysis, more bombs on a target is the only real criterion. Unless the bombs hit, it doesn't count."

"I've prepared a message saying you've hit the target. I've every confidence you'll let me send it."

"Good luck and good bombing."

Domei's dispatch also was beamed out in the English language directly to the United States, and was recorded by the FCC at 5:30 a. m. (EWT) 30 minutes after Radio Tokyo had broadcast its version of the attack.

Text of the Domei dispatch follows:

"Several formations of enemy B-29's (Army) bombers penetrated into the Tokyo area and Central Japan shortly after noon today. Incendiary bombs and explosives were dropped by the enemy aircraft in a suburban district of greater Tokyo, but no missiles were dropped in the central Japan area."

"Small fires were started among civilian homes and hospitals, but were, however, immediately brought under control, while practically no damage was suffered by important installations. The results achieved by our interception units are now being checked."

COLUMBUS MAN FINED AFTER CAR LEAVES ROAD

Everett M. Edmonds, 23, of Columbus, was fined $50 and costs $50 suspended on charges of operating a car while under the influence of alcohol by Squire B. T. Hedges Friday as the result of an accident on Route 23, north of Circleville, Thursday night.

Sheriff Charles Radcliff said Edmonds' car left the road, crashed through a fence and into a field on the Miller farm. A companion was reported injured but no trace of him was found. It was reported he was picked up by a passing motorist and taken to a hospital.

PHONE STRIKE COMES TO END

cause of complaint was the employment of out-of-town operators at wages in excess of those paid local girls.

The unions struck in protest against the fact that the so-called "transferees" received $18.25 weekly for living expenses in addition to their regular salary of $21 while the Dayton and Washington operators permanently employed in their respective communities got only the regular weekly salary.

Some 200 out-of-town operators are employed in Washington and 105 in Dayton.

I. R. Hudson, strike director of the National Federation of Telephone Workers, asserted that the strike was called off after an understanding had been reached with the WLB and the companies that the "transferees" would be removed from their jobs as quickly as possible.

"We also conferred with Economic Stabilization Director Fred M. Vinson and the same understanding was reached with him," Hudson said.

Nathan P. Feinsinger, WLB public member, insisted, however, that the only assurance given the strikers was that there would be no discrimination against them on their return to work. Feinsinger maintained that the strike collapsed because the union leaders were impressed by the fact that the government meant business and would not hesitate to seize the struck exchanges.

GILBERT SIGLER HAS IMPORTANT AIR FORCE JOB

AN EIGHTH AIR FORCE FIGHTER STATION, ENGLAND—Private First Class Gilbert J. Sigler, Route 4, Circleville has an important job at this 2nd Bombardment Division under command of Major General William E. Kepner in a communications set-up that is instrumental in saving the lives of American pilots and their airplanes.

Working in split seconds, Private First Class Sigler and other men, called Triangulators, locate on a map the positions of a plane from which an emergency call for directions has been transmitted. From the knowledge of this determined position the necessary directions and instructions are transmitted to guide the pilot to a safe landing on Allied soil. Since time is essential, for a minute later an airplane is miles from the spot where the call was made, Private First Class Sigler must be thoroughly familiar with his maps to fulfill the assignment and facts at tests that he is.

Private First Class Sigler is the son of Mr. and Mrs. Carl C. Sigler of the home address. He attended Walnut township school and was employed by the Clark Grave Vault Co. before he entered the army in December, 1942 and was stationed at Orlando, Fla., prior to coming overseas more than a year ago.

ANNUAL SEAL SALE SLATED TO START MONDAY

Annual sale of Christmas Seals will start in Circleville and Pickaway county Monday. The 40th anniversary of the sale of the first Christmas seals will be observed when the 1944 sale opens.

This year's Christmas Seal carries a modernistic picture of a postman holding an envelope in his upraised hand. The postman design was selected in memory of Elmer Holboell, Danish postal clerk, who first had the idea of selling Christmas Seals to raise funds to help the sick.

Boy Scouts of Troop 205, Ted Steele, scoutmaster, will distribute Christmas Seal posters in Circleville. Scouts participating in the distribution will be Marcus Albright, Dwight Radcliff, Donald Gilmore, Richard Smith, Harold McClarren, Louis McClarren, Richard Blaney, Marion Delong, Richard Anderson, Gene Radcliff, David Olney, John Smith.

The local drive is sponsored by the Pickaway county Tuberculosis and Health committee, of which Mrs. Larry Athey is executive secretary. Proceeds from the campaign are used in the fight against tuberculosis.

NEWS OF OUR MEN and WOMEN IN UNIFORM

Corporal James Coates has returned after spending two years in service in the South Pacific. He is visiting with his parents, Mr. and Mrs. George Coates, of Circleville Route 3. At the close of his 30-day furlough, he will be reassigned for duty in the U. S. Army Air Corps.

Good, U. S. M. C., who is stationed at the Marine Air Station in Santa Barbara, Cal., recently served as maid of honor for Sergeant Eleanor Segley, U. S. M. C., a native of Bucyrus, now stationed at Santa Barbara. Sgt. Segley sponsored the ship, S. S. Bucyrus, at its launching. The ship, a Victory freighter, was launched October 31 after ceremonies at Richmond Shipyard No. 1. G. H. Segley, of Bucyrus, who headed the victory ship bond committee in that city, was triggerman at the launching.

Staff Sergeant Millard W. Good, ASN 35000664, U. S. Army, another son of Mr. and Mrs. Good, has been awarded an Oak-Leaf cluster in addition to the Bronze Star Medal previously awarded. He received this for heroic service in connection with military operations against an enemy of the United States in France August 11 and 12, 1944.

When his platoon leader and platoon sergeant had become casualties, Sgt. Good took charge and reorganized the platoon, accomplishing this task by night and while under fire. He then proceeded to lead the group to a new position in preparation for an attack, traversing low swampy ground, exposed to enemy mortar fire, fording a stream four feet deep, and finally advancing along about a thousand yards of railroad embankment covered by hostile machine gun and small arms fire. Through his outstanding leadership and devotion to duty, the depleted platoon reached the new position on schedule, and successfully accomplished its mission in the ensuing attack. He entered military service in Ohio and was one of the first two men to enlist from Circleville.

Corporal and Mrs. Nelson Renick (the former Marlene Ebenhack), of Carlsbad, N. M., are spending his 10-day furlough at the home of Mr. and Mrs. Marcus Ebenhack, of Williamsport.

Medford Good, U. S. M. C., Washington, D. C., has been promoted from first sergeant to warrant officer. He is the son of Mr. and Mrs. Roy D. Good, East Franklin street.

Mr. and Mrs. Good's daughter, Private First Class Margaret E.

SOCIAL SECURITY REVISION

One of the first things Roosevelt will put before the new Congress is a revision of the entire Social Security Act, plus a new "cradle to the grave" social welfare program.

White House aides have been keeping it quiet, but they have talked this over with Senator Wagner of New York, Senate majority leader Alben Barkley, and Senate Finance Committee Chairman George of Georgia. All three are willing to go through with it. Roosevelt is prepared to make the following recommendations for a new bill as soon as the new Congress opens and he is reinaugurated:

1. A permanent floor under wages of 60 cents an hour, as advocated by Senator Pepper.
2. Extension of social security to cover farmers and returning servicemen.
3. Lowering of the age at which old-age benefits can be obtained from 65 to 60 years.
4. A general over-all increase in benefits to be paid those eligible for assistance under the Social Security Act.
5. Extension of the act to assist those losing wages due to illness or disability.
6. Enactment of an over-all Federal unemployment insurance program.

NOTE—Roosevelt will probably reveal this plan in his State of the Union address to Congress in January, will follow with a special message shortly thereafter.

THE WATER QUESTION IN A NUTSHELL

Does Circleville want a bond firm, under authority of a mortgage, to tell you when to sell more bonds and when to raise water rates? Read the following article that appeared in the Cincinnati Enquirer, November 9, 1944, and see what happens when a City is forced to do business the Bond House way.

Cincinnati Enquirer Article

WATER RATES

Raised In Hillsboro

To Assure Enough Money In Fund To Meet Retirement Payments On Bond Issue

Special Dispatch to The Enquirer

Hillsboro, Ohio, Nov. 8 — Hillsboro City Council today passed two ordinances connected directly with the village's water revenue bond issue, required to solve the shortage of water that has been felt here for the past 50 years.

The first ordinance approved by Council provided for the increase of city water rates, effective January 1, 1945. This proposal was deemed necessary by the bond firm that contracted for the city water revenue bonds to assure enough money in the water works fund to meet annual bond retirement obligations.

James E. McDermott, City Clerk, said that approximately $9,000 must be available each year to recall bonds issued against the proposed new water works project and that present rates do not provide a sufficient margin of income to assure the city and the bonding firm that yearly payments on the $163,000 issue premium and interest would be met.

Under the emergency measure, water rates in Hillsboro will be increased on a maximum basis as follows: First, 1,000 gallons, from $1.75 to $2; next 5,000 gallons, from 45 to 55 cents a thousand; next 30,000 gallons, from 25 to 30 cents a thousand; next 200,000 gallons, from 20 to 25 cents a thousand; next 200,000 gallons, from 12 to 15 cents a thousand, and exceeding 536,000 gallons, from 10 to 13 cents a thousand.

The second ordinance authorized the issuance of water revenue bonds in the amount of $163,000 at the rate of 2½ percent interest a year.

Miles of water mains have been built in Circleville in recent years, the pumping plant has been rebuilt to pump with electricity and many other improvements have been added, all at the expense of the Water Company. And the rates were not increased.

Why should Circleville saddle itself with a $500,000.00 (or thereabouts) bond issue and mortgage and in addition be faced with an increase in water rates whenever there is not enough income to pay off the bonds and interest?

Keep your low water rates, keep the taxes we pay, let us spend our money for needed improvements and don't mortgage your future. Vote NO on the water question.

Vote "NO" on December 5th

AIR FUTURE

WHAT is described as "a partial draft for an international air transport agreement" has just been published by the United States, Canada and Great Britain, for submission to delegates of the international civil aviation conference in Chicago. This suggested agreement was drawn up after nine days of private consultation. It makes certain compromises from the original stands taken by the nations concerned, and "left untouched the question of traffic division on which the British have been adamant." It represents, however, a gain in the international understanding of the problems of air future. It contains these provisions:

It establishes an "international air administration." This consists of an assembly on which each nation would have equal representation; a board of 15 directors, of whom seven would be named by countries "of chief importance in air transport," and a manager.

It prohibits discrimination among states and accepts the principle that civil air transport will not be used as an instrument of national policy in international relations.

Each country retains the right to designate the route to be followed over its territory by airline aircraft of another state. It forbids the granting of exclusive privileges to any other country or airline. It leaves air matters directly affecting world security to a general organization set up by the nations of the world to preserve peace.

It refers to an international permanent court-an arbitral tribunal—appeals from the decision of the agency board.

Now this does not do all that is necessary to straighten out the tangles of future air traffic. But it is an excellent beginning. And the fact cannot be overemphasized or repeated too often, that the time to plan these matters is now. Conference and consultation before the event is the best way to prevent trouble afterward. The air traffic of the future is one of the most important considerations of the post-war world.

TRICKS OF THE CONQUERED

THE revival of France is bringing to light some of the ingenious ways in which the French managed to elude German rule. One such has just been revealed by Stanley Rogers, an English correspondent.

When France was divided into occupied and unoccupied territory, it was strictly forbidden to pass from one to the other. The French got around this by traveling across the borders in coffins. As funerals were not stopped, more than 1,000 got away before German suspicions were aroused.

Two can play at the same game. When the United Nations occupy Germany after the war, such tricks are likely to be played by the Nazi underground movement. It will be well to be forewarned.

Special to Central Press

WASHINGTON—To informed observers in Washington there is a growing belief that the greatest single factor working against complete co-operation between Russia and the other United Nations is mutual suspicion of the motives behind their acts.

In all fairness, it has always been insisted that misunderstandings between Russia and the other three powers in the "big four" appear to fade away the higher one goes in the officialdom of the four United Nations.

The suspicion within international circles of Russian motives was perhaps best illustrated in the recent question of supplying UNRRA aid to liberated Poles. Russia held the supplies should be distributed under sponsorship of the Soviet-backed Lublin government and not by the London government-in-exile. Immediately the Allied press saw ghosts in the closet and accused Russia of a heartless action against the Poles because of political motives.

The debate went on in the press for weeks and then, one day recently, it was announced that the question had been solved. After thousands of words that had been written on the supposed controversy, the happy solution was given four paragraphs—and suspicion of Russia continued unaltered.

THE NAVY'S powerful battlefleets have gained such superiority in the Pacific as a result of the second battle of the Philippines that they can roam enemy waters almost at will. The only limiting factor to naval operations against Japan is enemy land-based aircraft, which must still be calculated in any attacks against the Pacific enemy.

To emphasize this degree of superiority, units of the Pacific battle fleet were reported to have steamed right into Japan's front yard

HAILE SELASSE PROTESTS

WASHINGTON—The state department is trying to hush it up, but Emperor Haile Selassie of Ethiopia has sent a strong protest to the United States Government against the British Government for refusing to evacuate Ethiopian territory.

The soulful, white-robed figure of the little Emperor, whose pleading speeches before the League of Nations against Mussolini's aggression in 1935 brought world public opinion to his support, now can no longer appeal to the League, which is dead, so he has written to the United States.

Last month, he also attempted to communicate with this columnist but, either because of British censorship or the State Department, the communication was stopped. Now, however, through other channels, this writer has ascertained that the British are not only occupying parts of two Ethiopian provinces, Ogaden and Harar, but apparently intend to keep them.

Three years ago, when the Italian armies finally were pushed out of Ethiopia, "Haile Selassie, the Conquering Lion of Tribe of Judah, Elect of the Lord, King of Kings of Ethiopia" was restored to his throne with considerable pomp and circumstance.

Newspapers all over the world, especially in London, made quite a fuss over the restoration. There was much rejoicing. The first seeds of war had sprouted when Mussolini romped roughshod over the peace machinery of the League and sent his heavy artillery against the rhinoceros-hide shields, the curved scimitars and the breech-loading rifles of His Majesty's army. Therefore London newspapers editorialized that the first wrong of the war had been righted.

BRITISH REFUSE TO LEAVE

Under the agreement by which the British restored the Emperor, the British could occupy Ethiopia for two years. Last March, that agreement was extended for another year, at the urgent demand of the British, though the Italians and Germans long had been gone from Africa.

Last month, however, the Emperor, still under the illusion that this war was being fought to free the world, asked the British if they would leave his territory by the end of the year. In reply, the British Government informed His Majesty that the natives of the rich Ogaden and Harar provinces did not want him as Emperor any more but decided to pay allegiance to a more powerful monarch, King George VI of England.

Discouraged, but never surrendering, the Lion of Judah pressed the point. He was told that the British had no intention of leaving. Parts of Harar and Ogaden provinces, it became clear, were to be annexed to nearby British Somaliland.

At this point, the Emperor, greatly disillusioned, addressed his appeal to the State Department. Distressed State Department officials have been sitting on the lid trying to keep the matter quiet, though making polite representations to the British Foreign Office that it should respect the rights of little nations.

NOTE—There are only two independent countries in Africa—both, incidentally, Christian. Liberia, founded by American slaves, is under American protection. Ethiopia, now under British protection, has appealed to the United States several times in the past.

DIET AND HEALTH

An Old-Time Drink

By LOGAN CLENDENING, M.D.

I GATHER from gossip and letters and moving up and down and hither and yon in the world Dr. Clendening will answer questions of general interest only, and then only through his column.

that the old-fashioned practice of drinking hot water is coming back into fashion.

One of my correspondents whom I quote this week wanted to know whether I thought drinking hot water with a little lemon in it in the morning was harmful to health. She had been told it was. This question puzzled me as much as if she had asked me whether breathing was harmful to health, but I found a day or two later an advertisement in a Los Angeles paper which advocated hot water and a few drops of lemon as a morning drink to start the day right. I suppose somebody is always ready to take the joy out of life by saying that whatever you like to do is bad for you, but when they said this one is unhealthy it is pretty near the limit.

Benefits of Hot Water

As to how much health giving qualities are derived from drinking hot water, at least it has good authority behind it. John Hunter, the greatest surgeon of his day in the world, was reported thus by his biographer—"Dr. Hunter was the subject of vertigo and suffered from noises in his ears and insomnia. Nothing gave him relief till he took a tumblerful of hot water every night just before going to bed. This gave him a good night's rest. So impressed was he by this simple means that he frequently prescribed it for patients with irritable stomachs."

Again it is related by an eminent medical authority that two Englishmen took the journey across America before it was opened up by railroads from east to west. Their only provision was hard biscuits and a spirit lamp to boil water. The hot water they used at first to soak the biscuits in, but they soon began to drink it and were astonished and pleased to find that it acted as a powerful stimulant and producer of strength.

The ordinary procedure used to be to drink a glass of hot water on arising, as soon and as regularly as the teeth are brushed. I can remember my father sitting down in his bedroom every morning in his nightgown and slowly drinking his glass of steaming water sip by sip. He claimed it regulated his bowels, gave a man a chance to compose his thoughts for the day and got the mucous out of his stomach. I can only recall that he lived in full possession of his faculties, his bowels and his stomach until the age of 78. Of course father sometimes had more mucous in his stomach than at other times, but—

Aid to Intestines

The addition of lemon juice adds a piquancy to the flavor of the hot water and allows you to drink more of it which undoubtedly starts the intestines into peristaltic action. The first soft drink ever to be introduced into America was lemonade, and I do not yet know of a better one. The claim that it adds Vitamin C and possibly B and A is well founded for those who are conscious-stricken about their vitamins.

Certainly whether the virtues of hot water are as advertised or not, nobody could ever say by the longest stretch of the imagination that it ever did anybody any harm.

In a medical treatise of an earlier day, "Fads of an Old Physician," by G. S. Keith, I read: "Hot water acts as a stimulant by supplying ready made heat or force, when the organs are not able to form the same. Hot water thus aids or supplements the chemical actions of the system. I have cases to show that this stimulating action of hot water is sufficient to bring the body out of the very lowest condition as to strength."

CHAPTER THIRTY-FIVE

Craig was still reluctant to share his plan with me. "If I could only do it myself. I tried to get up just now, while you were out of the room. It was no good."

"Don't be a fool," I said hotly. "Do you want to work up a fancy temperature?"

Suddenly he said, "It's a hypodermic, Miss Keate, Drue's hypodermic syringe."

"Oh," I responded weakly. "You see, Alexia's got it. You must search her room for it. She is sure it belongs to Drue. She found it somewhere . . ."

"Never mind—I know . . ."

"You know!"

"I put it there. In the fern."

He started upright, clasped his free hand quickly over his wounded shoulder and cried, "You! Why?"

"Never mind that either; I thought I was doing the right thing."

Craig lay there staring at me. Then he asked, "Why did you hide it? Did Drue really give my father the hypodermic?"

"Yes, she did, but she didn't kill him with it. I'll tell you anything I know later. Right now I think everybody but Maud is downstairs. If I'm to search Alexia's room I'd better do it quickly."

He agreed with me at once. "You'll have to hurry. Look in my dressing room, and in the cupboard in her bathroom. Then also, there is a kind of cupboard built into the wall beside her bed. You'll see. She says she puts jewelry in there when she doesn't want to bother with the safe."

I was on my feet. "When did Alexia tell you about that hypodermic?"

A subtle change came over his face; his mouth tightened a little, his lean jaw hardened; his eyes went past me and looked very remote and uncommunicative. "Not very long ago," he said. "She wouldn't tell me where she kept it. You'd better go. It's the second door to the left across the hall. I hate to ask you to do this . . ."

I went at once to Alexia's room. The trooper was the only person in the long, wide corridor and he was away down near Drue's room with his back turned toward me.

But I didn't find the hypodermic. I found Alexia's room with no trouble and I searched it; then went directly to the little bookshelf and the cupboard. And found not the syringe but—three checks made out to Frederic Miller.

They were for five thousand dollars each, signed by Conrad Brent, dated in July, September and October of 1938. They were canceled and endorsed "Frederic Miller" in an ornate and curly handwriting, and pinned together with a little steel pin. They were lying flat, under a soft suede case, the kind you use for jewelry when traveling.

I took the checks, adding them to my already substantial little hoard of clues. I'd tell Nugent. But I'd tell Craig first.

When I heard voices somewhere in the distance I thought I'd better give up. I ducked out of Alexia's and into my patient's room as Alexia emerged at the head of the stairs, followed by Peter Huber.

Craig was watching for me eagerly but still looked a little startled at my possibly precipitous entrance. "Somebody chasing you?" he said.

I straightened my cap and caught my breath. He got up on his elbow. "Did you find it?"

"No," I hated the disappointment in his eyes.

He lay back against the pillows. "Oh. All right, Miss Keate. You did your best. She's given it to the police, then. She said she would."

She hates Drue. It's because of . . . He stopped there, abruptly. And I added crisply, "Because of you, I suppose. She makes it clear enough."

There was a sad, altogether grave, look in his face.

"I hurt Alexia's pride one time. I didn't realize I was doing it; I was in love with Drue, you see. I was so in love that"—he paused and then said, simply—"so in love that there wasn't any other woman in the world. There wasn't anything but Drue."

He stopped again and then went on, "Alexia just didn't exist for me. Nothing did really."

There was another silence; I was wishing Drue could hear him and resolving to tell her. Then he moved restively and said in a different tone, "I tried to humor Alexia. My father loved her—he did, you know. She married him and he loved her."

"Don't get excited," I warned, rearranging the covers he had twisted around. "You'll get a fever . . ."

He glared at me and I glared back at him. And then as we were staring at each other like two enraged cats looking for an opening, he grinned. "I'm sorry, Miss Keate. It's only that it makes me savage, being helpless like this."

"You're lucky you're not dead," I remarked.

The shadow came back into his face. "Yes, but it's Drue that's in danger. If she gave him digitalis . . ."

"She tried to save his life. She didn't give him enough to kill him. Unfortunately, though," I added grimly, "there's no way to prove that. Are you sure Alexia gave the syringe to the police? Perhaps it was only a threat."

"I think she meant it. She knows I still love Drue. I tried not to let her see. I was afraid of what she would do to Drue. Sounds queer to say you're afraid of anybody. But Alexia's not like other people."

He paused and then thoughtfully, quietly, as if he were explaining something to himself as well as to me, talked of Alexia. "We've known each other since we were children, you know; Nicky and Alexia and I. They used to come here for summers when their mother was alive; then she married again and went abroad to live. Nicky and Alexia were pushed around anyhow, schools in France and Italy, camps in Switzerland, hotels everywhere. After their mother died they were shipped back here. They hadn't really much of a chance and never enough money. My father always liked Alexia."

"Your father was in love with her."

"Yes, later. Perhaps all along without realizing it. At any rate Alexia married him. She's ruthless in a way."

"She could murder anybody."

He looked up at me quickly, then said slowly, "Not unless she was so angry that she didn't stop to think. But that's why I'm afraid of what she might do to Drue."

There was a sincerity in his voice and I did decide (provisionally) that Craig Brent had not murdered his father. And I must talk to Drue and among other things tell her that. Perhaps, then, she would explain about the medicine-box—that is, if her determined silence regarding it really was (as I thought it was) to protect Craig.

I was thinking that when he said abruptly, "That shooting in the meadow night before last; you remember?"

"How could I forget?"

"Nugent thinks it was a kind of spur-of-the-moment attack on you."

"Just an idle impulse, no doubt."

I remarked bitterly, "I'm sure two bullets whizzed over my head. Of course, he may have been aiming at Anna. Or he may have been just a little prankster, bent on having his fun and giving us both a scare."

I said it sarcastically, but he looked perfectly sober.

"Perhaps," he said and added, "I suppose there'll be traces of digitalis in the little—what do you call it, barrel?—of the hypodermic?"

"Yes. Unless it's been cleaned. Did Alexia see me put it there?"

"She didn't say."

I thought back rapidly to the hurried moments following Conrad's death: "Alexia was walking up and down in the library, just behind the big desk. She must have seen me put it under the fern. Bevens was coming down the stairs just ahead of me. When I turned I saw no one. But—yes, the stair landing is visible from the library; she must have moved out of sight just as I turned. Then I suppose Alexia took it—later, on her way upstairs, immediately after she left the library."

"Miss Keate, who telephoned for the police? It was of course a significant question and had been from the first. But it was still without an answer."

"I don't know."

"If we could find out who did that and why. If I could do anything—anything . . ."

I looked at him, decided to chance it, took a long breath and said, "Look here, you still love your wife."

"She's not my wife. You forget that."

"Fiddlesticks! There's no law against remarrying. If Nicky . . ."

"What about Nicky?"

"I'd hate to see her marry him."

"You'd hate . . ."

"Listen, Miss Keate, there's something you don't know: That's why she left me. Because of Nicky."

Words of Wisdom

The love of country produces good manners; and good manners, love of country. The less we satisfy our individual passions, the more we leave to our general.—Montesquieu.

Hints on Etiquette

It is entirely correct for a woman who is eating alone in a restaurant to read a paper during her meal.

Today's Horoscope

You are very conceited, but have good self-control, are ambitious and idealistic, if today is your natal day. You lack perseverance and quite often fall short of attaining your goal. You are musical and artistic, steadfast in your love, loyal to your friends and loving in your life. Concentrate on business in the next 12 months, and it will rapidly improve if initiative and enterprise are employed. Seek favors from authority. This period is unfavorable for domestic and love affairs and new feminine friendships, however. Born today a child will have many ups and downs in life. Caution in business and friendships will be advisable. Threat of deception, even fraud and imposition, are foreseen.

One-Minute Test Answers

STARS SAY—

ACCORDING to the lunar aspects dominant on this day there is hope of placing the future and its fortunes on a sound and secure basis, but this by concentration of the energies, faculties and talents, with well-laid plans, tactics and enduring objectives. These should be sustained by practice, fortitude, and persistent effort and industry, against obstacles, impediments and personal influence of those in high places. With a conservation of assets and resources steadily increasing, benefits and possessions should be in sight. Restrain impulses to strife.

Those whose birthday it is may be obliged to wrest security and enduring good fortune from difficulties, frustrations and obstacles of a tenacious nature. With restraint of the feelings and impetuous emotions, supported by a determined effort and industry against many odds and reserves, in the long run there should be stability, sound foundations and growing possessions of real value. However, do not overdo, take time for relaxation and some leisure.

A child born on this day may have much character, fortitude, industry and application, with which to overcome reversals, frustrations and impediments. It may reap solid rewards with advancing years.

225 Couples At Jaycee Thanksgiving Dance

Annual Event Proves Big Success

More than 225 couples enjoyed the gay evening of dancing Wednesday at the annual Thanksgiving Eve function sponsored by the members of the Junior Chamber of Commerce. Boys home from their stations in the armed forces and young people on holiday vacation from colleges and universities joined with the Circleville dancers to make the affair one outstanding in social functions of the last two or three years.

Colorful decorations of orange and green included a false ceiling, and a clever arrangement around the band shell on the stage of Memorial hall auditorium. Smart street-length frocks in rich autumn shades added brilliance to the dance as did the uniforms of the various services.

Smooth and up-to-the-minute music for dancing was provided by Mac Toill and his eight-piece orchestra. A girl vocalist, heard in many choruses, was received with enthusiasm.

Several informal parties preceded the dance.

Judson Lanman served as general chairman and was assisted in arranging the affair by Dick Morris and Henry Helweggen; decoration committee, Don Henkle, Harry Graef, John Moore, Robert Eliza and Vaden Couch; ticket committee, Elliott White, LaVerne Scranton, George Mallet and Robert Lawrence.

Light refreshments were available throughout the evening.

Logan Elm Grange

Approximately 50 members and guests heard with interest the excellent illustrated talk presented by Professor E. P. Reid, Ohio State university, at the meeting of Logan Elm grange in Pickaway school auditorium. Prof. Reid talked on soil and water conservation.

At the close of the evening, the hospitality committee served ice cream.

Christmas Lighting

"The Office of War Utilities of the War Production Board asked city officials, civic clubs, chambers of commerce, merchants and citizens generally to dispense with outdoor decorative lighting this Christmas, as in 1942 and 1943. This was done at the request of the Solid Fuels Administration for War."

The attitude of the Office of War Utilities toward Christmas lighting was announced after numerous inquiries had been received as to whether the restrictions of the last two years could be dispensed with this Christmas.

OWU is not asking that indoor Christmas lighting, whether in homes or in stores, be eliminated, but believes that outdoor lighting, such as festooned store fronts and decorated streets, should be dispensed with as long as fuels are scarce.

Co-operation with this request is in the interest of fuel conservation.

CHARLIE'S GUESTS SUNDAY

Lauritz Melchior, world famous Wagnerian tenor of the Metropolitan Opera and Irwin Corey, "Professor and World's Foremost Authority" will be Charlie McCarthy's guests Sunday.

RADIO NEWS NOTES

Three of the musical Shilkrets may soon be represented on J. C. Flippen's "Correction Please" show. Already, Maestro Jack Shilkret has one brother in his quiz show orchestra, a professional physician whose favorite form of relaxation is playing trumpet in Jack's band. Now, the youngest of the musical Shilkrets, Warner, 14-year old son of Jack, and already an up-and-coming composer, has had one of his tunes accepted by a publisher, and it's due to be played on "Correction Please" soon.

Dunniger's recent cross-country tour, with frequent personal appearances between broadcasts, has proved so exhausting that the Master Mentalist is attempting to cancel all personal appearances for the rest of 1944. Dunniger loses about three pounds every time he demonstrates his mental powers, and the wear and tear of barnstorming has been too much for him.

Pickaway County Native, Husband Killed In Route 23 Crash.

HOLIDAY TRIP ENDS IN CRASH WITH BIG TRUCK

Mr. and Mrs. Dale Freeman
Fatally Injured; Nephew
Slightly Hurt

A Pickaway county native and her husband enroute to spend Thanksgiving with Pickaway county relatives were killed Thursday when their car collided with a tractor-trailer on Route 23 a short distance north of Pickaway county.

The victims were Truman "Dale" Freeman, 39, Curtiss-Wright machinist, and Frances H. Freeman, 34, clerk in the toy department at Lazarus store. They lived at 144 Dana avenue, Columbus. Their nephew, Jerry D. Freeman, 6, Columbus, riding with them, suffered a lacerated lip, and bruises on the left leg and above the right eye.

According to state highway patrolmen, the tractor-trailer, belonging to the Strawser freight lines, and driven by Louis J. White, 42, of Columbus, was coming off the north end of the Big Walnut creek bridge when the trailer skidded, struck the Freeman car, jackknifed with the trailer, and jammed the car against the guard-rail.

Both Mr. and Mrs. Freeman suffered fractured skulls.

Mrs. Freeman is survived by her mother, Mrs. Blanche Riggins, of near Williamsport; a sister, Mrs. Betty Neff, of near Mt. Sterling, and a brother, Ted Riggins, serving in the Army. Mrs. Freeman was born and reared in Jackson township, Pickaway county. Mr. Freeman is survived by his parents, Mr. and Mrs. I. J. Freeman, of Columbus, six brothers and two sisters, all of Columbus.

Funeral will be held at 10 a. m. Monday in the Avondale U. B. church in Columbus with burial in Greenlawn cemetery, Columbus. Friends may call at the A. K. Graulich and Son funeral home in Columbus.

Kenneth Seymour, Canal road, was fined $15 and costs for hunting without a license. Both cases were heard in Squire B. T. Hedges' court.

WATER SERVICE COMPANY PLANS REORGANIZATION

Announcement had been made Friday the Ohio Water Service company has made application to the State Public Utilities commission for authorization to issue 121,566 shares of new $10 par value stock under a capital readjustment plan to break away from the Federal Water and Gas corporation.

In its application for issuance of new stock the company states it operates water plants in Circleville, Washington C. H., Struthers, Massillon and Marysville and that it now has 40,522 shares of no common stock outstanding, valued at $3,155,897.71.

About two years ago the Securities and Exchange commission directed the Federal Water and Gas corporation, which holds the controlling interest in the Ohio Water Service company through ownership of approximately two-thirds of Class A common stock, to dispose of its holdings. This stock is to be sold to Ohio interests, according to the reorganization plans.

According to the announcement on completion of the purchase and distribution of the new stock issue, the Ohio Water Service will no longer be under jurisdiction of the Securities and Exchange commission. It will still be subject to regulation by the Public Utilities commission of Ohio. It is also understood the management of the company will remain under the direction of G. Taylor Evans of Poland, Ohio, who is at present vice president, general manager and treasurer of the company.

CHANGE OF VENUE

An order for change of venue in the divorce case of Stacey Thomas against Kermit Thomas was issued in common pleas court Wednesday by Judge Earl D. Parker. The case was transferred to Madison county court.
